

CRAIG SCOTT

Raising the Value of Human Life

Craig Scott is a survivor of the 1999 Columbine High School shooting. He was in the most intense scene of the shooting, where 10 students were killed including his sister, Rachel. Since then he has been traveling sharing his life-changing story to help schools and communities become a better place. He speaks on the value of human life, resiliency, and how to turn pain into purpose. Craig has had numerous appearances on Oprah, the Today Show, Good Morning America, and many others. His life mission is to help people understand their intrinsic value and the intrinsic value of others.

Delano High School is excited to welcome Craig to our school and community. He is hosting a multi-media presentation to the entire student body, breakout sessions with student leaders, a staff development presentation and community speaking event.

We welcome all parents and community members to his additional community presentation held in the evening at Delano High School Auditorium
